

PICKEREL CREEK CONTROLLED DEER HUNT

Congratulations for being selected to participate in the Pickerel Creek Wildlife Area Youth Muzzleloader Deer Hunt. This letter provides you with some background information on the wildlife area and some tips on helping you be successful on your hunt. Purchased in 1987 by the Ohio Division of Wildlife, Pickerel Creek is one of the few remaining wetland complexes on the Sandusky Bay shoreline. This 3,200 acre wetland complex is a part of what was once called the Great Black Swamp, an area from Cleveland to Detroit, which totaled over 300,000 acres. During the early 1900's, the entire region was drained for agricultural purposes. Much of Pickerel Creek was once farmland at one time. Shortly after the acquisition, the Division of Wildlife began restoring the wetlands on the property that once existed hundreds of years ago. Today it has a variety of upland and wetland wildlife for sportsmen and women to enjoy.

The area you will be hunting is the 230 acre state refuge portion on Pickerel Creek Wildlife Area. Access to the state refuge is by permit only. Permits are granted to waterfowl hunters and trappers in the fall / winter. The only deer hunting permitted in refuge is the youth muzzleloader hunt, which you have been successfully drawn. Much deer hunting occurs around the refuge. Therefore, deer tend to congregate in the refuge in very high numbers. The area you will be hunting is very diverse. Overall, the western side of the refuge is very thick with vegetation. Deer tend to bed down in this area. The eastern side is more open with mature forest. After the first day, deer tend to stay towards the thicker areas. A dike down the center of the refuge is a popular area for hunters to intercept deer from the two habitat types. Use extreme caution hunting this area, as other hunters maybe traveling this dike as well from the opposite direction. Hunters may hunt anywhere in the refuge, however, they must park in their assigned parking lot. Some areas can be wet depending on rainfall. Waterproof knee boots are highly suggested. A pair of waders (hip or chest) may be necessary to access some of the areas as well. Dress appropriately for cold weather. The area can be very cold especially if Sandusky Bay is frozen. Use extreme caution on the western side of the refuge in a high wind situation. Many trees have died (emerald ash borer damage) and may fall un-expectantly. Enjoy your hunt and be safe!
